If I Worked at an Animal Shelter

If I worked at an animal shelter, I think I would be asked to play with the animals. If I were asked to play with the animals, then I would take two at a time and play with them.

If I worked at an animal shelter, I might be asked to take the animals on walks. If I were asked to take animals on walks, I would take each animal, one at a time, and walk them.

If I worked at an animal shelter, I would probably be asked to make sure each animal has food and water. And if they don't, I'll give them some.

If I worked at an animal shelter every once in a while, I might be asked to go out and look for stray animals so that I can take them back to the animal shelter and take care of them.

If I worked at an animal shelter, when I play with the animals, I would probably take them outside. So after the animals have been outside, I would most likely be asked to give them a bath and brush them, so that if a person came looking for a pet, the animal would look nice.

Well, you're probably wondering, "What if a person does choose an animal to be their pet?" This is what happens.

So, first of all, if I worked at an animal shelter, I would make sure no animal is over $400 because I would want every animal to find a nice home.

So, if somebody does find an animal they like, I would first tell them the price, then I would tell them about that animal, such as what breed it is, what it likes to do, and how to take care of that animal. Then they pay and the animal is theirs!

Hope you liked my story!
