The animals would probably thank the Lord for being able to talk. Animals would be friendly to each other. They would describe their feelings. All the animals would speak of personal needs. Animals would in a way be like humans. They would ask for food when they are hungry or ask for shelter when hurt.

All types of animals say different things. A cat would say got milk or say want to go for a race? A dog would tell a walker not to move because it's dangerous to cross the street. A snake would say don't get too close or I'll bite you. A bird would sing in words.

If animals could talk the world would be so so neat, no more wondering what each others needs were because you could understand one another.
